Introduction

In the event of a tree emergency, it is important to take quick and decisive action. Trees that are in distress can pose a serious threat to people and property, so it is crucial to know what to do when one is faced with this type of situation. Here at TreeNewal, we want our customers to be as prepared as possible for any tree-related emergency. That is why we have put together this list of six things you need to keep in mind when faced with a tree emergency.

What Is a Tree Emergency?

Before we get into the specifics of what to do in a tree emergency, it is important to first understand what qualifies as an emergency.

A tree emergency is any situation in which a tree is posing an immediate threat to people or property. This can include situations where trees have been uprooted in a storm and are now leaning precariously against a building, or tree limbs have broken off and are hanging dangerously over a power line. In short, if there is any reason to believe that a tree poses a danger to people or property, it is considered an emergency.

How to Handle a Tree Emergency

Now that we have answered the question “what is a tree emergency,” it is time to get into the specifics of what to do if you find yourself in one. Here are six things you need to keep in mind:

Call Tree Professionals

The first thing you should do when faced with a tree emergency is to call tree professionals who are qualified to deal with the situation. At TreeNewal, all of our arborists are ISA Certified, which means they have the training and experience necessary to handle any tree emergency.

Don't Try to DIY

In a tree emergency, time is of the essence. That is why it is important to resist the urge to try to resolve the situation yourself. Many people think that they can save time and money by handling tree emergencies on their own, but this is often not the case. Without the proper training and equipment, attempting to resolve a tree emergency can actually end up doing more harm than good.

Create a Safety Perimeter

Once you have contacted tree professionals, it is important to create a safety perimeter around the tree. This will help to ensure that people and property are protected from any potential danger.

Stay Calm

In any emergency situation, it is important to stay calm. This will help you to think clearly and make the best decisions for the situation.

Follow Instructions

When tree professionals arrive on the scene, it is important to follow their instructions. They will be able to assess the situation and take the necessary steps to resolve it in the safest and most efficient way possible.

Be Prepared

The best way to deal with a tree emergency is to be prepared for one ahead of time. This means having a plan in place and knowing who to call. At TreeNewal, we can help you create a tree emergency plan that is tailored to your specific needs. Contact us today to learn more.

By following these six simple tips, you can be sure that you are prepared for any tree emergency that may come your way. Tree emergencies can be stressful, but by being prepared and knowing what to do, you can minimize the risk of harm to people and property. Contact TreeNewal today to learn more about how we can help you be prepared for a tree emergency. Our ISA Certified arborists are always here to help.
